

Retirement Countdown Fund

As at 31 December 2024

Overview

The Retirement Countdown Fund (RCF) is designed to deliver returns that are expected to preserve the real value of member savings over the long-term, after the asset based charge. There may be some variability against this target, especially over shorter time periods. The RCF seeks to achieve its return objective by investing in liquid money market instruments and short-dated investment grade bonds. It is one of two funds forming part of a member's Lifecycle. The allocation to the RCF increases as a member approaches retirement.

The Fund places importance on responsible investment (RI) and is managed against explicit targets. Overtime, the RI allocation will fluctuate but is targeted to account for at least 75% of the portfolio.

Lifecycle: The retirement Lifecycle is in three phases, from savings, to the glidepath phase, to retirement. During the glidepath phase the majority of member pension savings are gradually moved from the Diversified Growth Fund (DGF) to the RCF, over a 10-year period. At the end of the 10-years, 70% of a member's pension savings are invested in the RCF and 30% invested in the DGF.

Full details of lifecycle and fund objectives are set out in the Statement of Investment Principles, here.

What happened over the quarter

In November, the Bank of England cut interest rates to 4.75%, marking the second of two interest rate cuts in 2024.

The Bank of England stated that with inflation close to the 2% target, they were able reduce interest rates further from the 5% set in August. However, they emphasised caution to avoid cutting rates by too much and too quickly, to prevent the risk of re-inflating the economy.

Short-dated investment-grade credit had another positive quarter as markets were supported by interest rate cuts from the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve.
